In defining the term "minority group," the presence of discrimination is the identifying factor. As Louis Wirth has pointed out, "minority group" is not a statistical concept, nor need it denote an atten group. A minority group is any group of people who because of their physical or cultural characteristics, are singled out from the others in the society in which they live for differential and unequal treatment, and who therefore regard themselves as objects of collective discrimination." Women are getting discriminated by men in every spheres of life, like, economical, social, educational, cultural, religious and political etc.

It has been indicated that women fail to present in full force, they lack a sense of group identification and do not harbor feelings of being treated unfairly because of their sex membership. Can it then be said that women have a minority group status in our society? The answer to this question depends upon the values of the observer. If we assume that there are no differences attributable to sex membership as such that would justify easting men and women indifferent social roles, it can readily be shown that women do occupy a minority group status in our society.

Human consciousness in modern society is conditioned by the concept of human rights and human dignity. The laws regarding women, drawn up during the medieval period by the jurists, though based on interpretations of the scriptures, are unlikely to be accepted by women today. They no longer accept their subordinate position. They demand equal status with men.
